Getting On Line Without a Computer or Internet Access at Home
A Parents' Mini-Guide to Accessing Internet Resources to Help Your Child(ren)
Developed by the Statewide Parent Advocacy Network © 2008

Introduction

In today's world, there are many resources that are available to parents on the internet. Parents can find out about child development, help for children with special needs, positive parenting, health coverage, and many other important issues about your children. Parents can also get information about jobs and job training, immigration, and government benefits.

But what can parents do if you don't have a computer or internet access at home? There's an easy and free answer – your local public library!

Internet Access at Public Libraries

Ninety-five percent of public libraries offer free access to computers and the internet. Public library patrons use library computers to learn basic computer and Internet skills. There is no reason to worry or be embarrassed about things like cost or lack of knowledge about how to use the Internet. Use of library computers and internet services is FREE! Librarians can provide one-on-one training. This informal, personal assistance can help you learn basic computer and Internet skills while you are looking for information. Some libraries even provide formal Internet training classes or workshops on basic computer skills, word processing, or using different databases.

If you read and speak only Spanish, you may be wondering whether or not it's worth your while to try to get onto the internet. With the new Traducelo Ahora (Translation Now) program now available through a grant from IBM to the Statewide Parent Advocacy Network (SPAN), the answer is yes! This free program gives you the ability to translate emails and websites from English to Spanish and Spanish to English using any computer that has access to the internet. An email that you send in Spanish can be translated into English. When that person responds back to you in English, it will be translated into Spanish. This program will help you become an effective advocate; find information on jobs, health, human services and other resources quickly and easily; and communicate with your child(ren)'s doctors, teachers, and other service providers.

Benefits of Using Traducelo Ahora

SPAN piloted use of Traducelo Ahora with over 50 Spanish-speaking families around New Jersey for several months. Here's what they say about the program:

"It's fabulous! So quick and easy to use. It's a great tool!"

"It has opened up my world! I am now able to communicate beyond my language limitations!"

"I cannot believe how many resources are available! I have so much I need to learn. I can simply translate and print the material that will help equip me to become a better advocate for my child."

"WOW! I am connected! I have an email address now and enjoy to surf around on the Internet! I am getting so many great resources on upcoming state events from SPAN."

"It was so difficult before to connect with my child's doctor over the phone but now I can send an email and now he responds promptly. I can now send in my questions and concerns before scheduled visits so that I make sure to get the answers that I need about my child's health and medication. I really feel more empowered now that I am able to get my concerns addressed."

"Agencies can hear our voices now! We contacted a few agencies to request trainings for Spanish speaking families and now they are listening."

"I never knew how much information I was missing out on, now I can be more informed and connected with my child's disability and what's available as far as intervention. I can now be more aware of upcoming activities & support groups available in my child's school, community and state."

"Thank you for helping us to communicate more effectively."

It's clear that using Traducelo Ahora to find out about resources can be very helpful to you and your family. If you don't have a computer or internet access at home, computer and Internet access at your local public library can help you keep in touch with family and friends, complete homework assignments, find job listings, and write to your elected officials, in addition to helping you help your child(ren). So how do you get started?

Getting Started

The first thing to do is to go to your local public library. You can find your closest public library by looking in your phone book. Or you can call the New Jersey State Library at (609) 278-2640 to find out the telephone number and address of your closest public library. (Other possible sources are community colleges and community-based groups).

Call the library to find out their hours of operation. Ask if there are special hours for use of the computers and the internet. Ask if there is any training available on how to use the library computers and internet. Then make your arrangements to go to the library!

Guidelines for Using Public Library Computers and Internet

Most New Jersey Public Libraries have guidelines, or rules, for using their computers and internet. Some of the guidelines might include:

1. Computer users must have a library card. Usually anyone who lives in the geographic area served by that library may register for a library card. You need to show your identification, such as a drivers' license or other identification with your address on it. If you don't have identification with your address on it, you can provide your other identification plus a bill (rent, utility) or other documentation of your address. You do NOT need to show a social security card or other evidence of legal status in the United States.
2. Computers are usually available during normal hours of library operation. Each library has its own hours. Some libraries are open only during the day, while others have evening hours. Some are only open during the week, while others are open on weekends. You need to check with your local library to find out their hours. (Some library schedules change in the summer).
3. Users are often limited in how much time they can spend using the library computers and internet. For example, the library might limit use to two 30-minute sessions each day. Sometimes you can extend your time on the computer, but usually only if no one is waiting.
4. Users must behave appropriately. Staff may end your session if you are using the computer inappropriately or if you are violating the library's conduct policy.
5. You should not change settings on the computer.
6. Usually you may not use your own software programs on the library's computers or alter the computer settings.
7. Usually you may not download any files onto the hard drives of library computers. You might be able to download files onto your own "floppy disk," "memory stick," or "CD."
8. Library staff is often available to provide technical help or troubleshooting. Sometimes you need to make a reservation or arrangements to get help in advance.
9. Libraries usually retain the right to reserve computers for special purposes. It's a good idea to check with the library before going in to make sure computers are available.
10. You must respect the privacy of others during your computer sessions.

Using the Traducelo Ahora Spanish Translation Program

Follow these easy steps to use the Traducelo Ahora/Translation Now Spanish translation program.

Logging In

First, go to the website, www.traduceloahora.org. Go to top right corner of the page and click on the Registration link. Please complete the personal information. For State/province, indicate NJ; for city indicate Newark.

When you see the area that asks for your School/Organization, scroll with your arrow and find SPAN in the directory. Click on SPAN; then enter SPAN's Project pass code NJTRADUCELO (all caps). For your user ID, use your email address. For your new passcode, select something that you will remember (and write it down somewhere!).

You are almost done!

When you have completed the process noted above you will receive an email from the service confirming both your User ID and your unique Passcode. Please save that email for your reference. Now you are all set!

Translating websites

You can now translate websites! Whenever you want to access an English-language website in Spanish, go to www.traduceloahora.org. Sign in using your User ID and unique passcode. Enter the website you want to visit on the URL link at the center of the page. Within seconds, it will be immediately translated into Spanish!

Sending emails in Spanish

You must log in to send emails to be translated. Sign into to www.traduceloahora.org using your User ID and unique passcode. To translate emails you must always copy (cc) translate@traduceloahora.org along with your recipients, so you should add translate@traduceloahora.org to your address book for easy reference. When you copy translate@traducelora.org along with the person to whom you are sending the email, the recipients will receive the email in both English and Spanish. You will also receive a copy of the initial email you sent along with the text in both English and Spanish.

You will remain logged into the service unless you log off. To log on and off you must go to www.traduceloahora.org.

IMPORTANT NOTE: The Traducelo Ahora service does not translate attachments. You must copy, cut and paste the attachment, and then formulate another email to translate additional information.
